

Invasive Pests Resources

The ARInvasives.org web site, developed by the Arkansas Forest Resources Center, is your portal to information about invasive pests in Arkansas. Use the web site to learn about what pests are one the way, what pests are here, and where they are.

The HungryPests.com web site, developed by APHIS, is a national web site providing information about invasive pests and how to combat them.

The Pest Tracker web site maps information from national pest surveys. The web site is a great place to find out which pests have invaded your neighborhood.

pest.ceris.purdue.edu

The TexasInvasives.org web site provides abundant information about many invasive pests that are also found in Arkansas. If they list a pest for northeast Texas, it has the potential to be an invasive pest here, too.

These four web sites, and many more, serve as resources for fighting invasive pests in your neighborhood. If you would like additional information about invasive pests, contact your county Cooperative Extension agent.

Invasive pests – Taking the natural out of the Natural State