AIMS Contact Method Definitions

Methods Requiring Demographic Information:

Demonstrations- Demonstrating processes, activities, new technology, etc. with little to no additional educational information delivered. Example: Ag field demos; Demonstrating healthy cooking techniques during an event.

Educational Class: Single session – An educational activity in which participants are engaged in Extension program on a single day. Example: Farm to You at a school; PAT session held in a single day.

Educational Class: Series, 2 – 4 sessions – Educational activities in which participants are engaged in in Extension programming for two to four lessons/sessions over multiple days. Example: 4-H School Enrichment program that occurs once a month for four months.

Educational Class: Series, 5 or more sessions – Educational activities in which participants are engaged in Extension programming for five or more lessons/sessions over multiple days. Example: Extension Get Fit classes that occur five or more times.

Farm/Landowner Visit- Contacts made at the clientele's farm, residence, etc. with the goal of examining and giving recommendations based on what is observed. Example: Visits to soybean field for spray recommendations; 4-H livestock project visits.

Field Day/Tour/Camp- An organized event consisting of multiple sessions/teaching methods/topics. Example: Ag Awareness Events; 4-H County Camp.

Meetings- Contacts made through an organized meeting, either Extension organized or representing Extension. Example: Giving Extension updates at Quorum Court meeting, Discussing food and nutrition programming at Hometown Health Coalition meeting.

One-on-One Consultations- Contacts made with one individual or a small group that is not part of a meeting, class or other delivery method. May occur in or out of the office. Example: Office visits, conversations at the grocery store/café/gas station.

Staffed Display – Extension programming is provided via demonstration/staffed display where there is DIRECT contact with participants. Example: Food demonstration and exhibit at a grocery store; 4-H STEM activity booth at a festival.

Train the Trainer Workshop- Extension programming that delivers program information to clientele who will eventually deliver that program to clientele. Example: Best Care trainings, 4-H volunteer trainings, Master Gardener Trainings.

Web-Based Instruction/Education- Educational programming that utilizes web conferencing/web meeting technology (like Zoom). Example: 4-H Volunteer Training delivered via Zoom, Virtual Field Days delivered in real time. Note: Demographics need to be collected in order to report contacts with this method.

If you are teaching a program face to face and need to utilize web meeting technology for a few participants, do not separate out those participants here, include them in the program's primary delivery method.

Direct Contact Methods Not Requiring Demographic Information:

Email- Emailed contacts in response to a request/question from clientele. This does not include emails sent to distribution lists (see "Newsletters" below). Example: Responding to emailed question on 4-H Clubs in the county.

Mail- Contacts in which Extension information was mailed to clientele in response to a request. This does not include mail sent to distribution lists (see "Newsletters" below). Example: Mailing soil sample results with an Extension fact sheet to a client.

Phone- All Extension related phone contacts.

Social Media- Contacts in which clientele "engage" with Extension social media content. Example: Facebook comments, Twitter re-tweets, Instagram likes. Note: Please see AIMS Help guides for specifics on reporting social media contacts.

Indirect Contact Methods:

Newsletters/e-newsletters – Extension printed or emailed materials (flyers, fact sheets, pamphlets) containing articles and information of interest that is distributed to a specific group (general working off an Extension distribution list). Example: EHC newsletters sent to members; Market reports sent to producers.

Educational Resources- Stand-alone Extension handouts, brochures, materials. These do not include materials supplied as part of a direct contact Extension session. Example: Extension dairy foods brochure clientele can pick up at DHS. Extension Brucellosis vaccination information clientele can pick up at feed store.
